The Lace Curtain Sale. The current that is now sweeping through Upholstery is but an illustration of cause and effect. The twenty-five hundred pairs of Lace Curtains from the two great trade sales of recent date in New York offered at a quarter to a third less than usual prices, together with several lots (where there were too many or too few) of our own direct importation offered at lowered prices, is the cause. The current of buyers, perceptibly swelling day by day, is the natural effect. And yet high water mark has not been reached. The news is spreading—the interest increases. We'll have more to say about Upholstery and Curtains tomorrow.

Babies Department_third Floor

It is difficult to describe styles and qualities. Otherwise it could be shown how little are Palais Royal prices. The variety can be hinted of in giving price extremes: Christening Robes, $1.98 to $9.25 each. Long Christening Cloaks $1.98 to $12 each. Silk Bonnets, 75c to $11 each. Carriening Colonia, $1.48 to $12 each. Bibs, 12c to $1.25 each. Cloth and Silk Coats, $2.68 to $22 each. Long and Short Flannel Skirts, 25c to $3.68 each. Camoric Skirts, 39c to $3.68 each. Such a multitude of prices between the extremes quoted above that we can't imagine a more complete variety. We know that Palais Royal prices are lowest in the majority of instances. The merchants business is largely credit will at times quote our prices for goods easily valued, but you will almost invariably find that Palais Royal quotations for high-class goods are from 10 to 20 per cent less than pre-vailing.

and at 9:30 o'clock the regular business of the day was commenced. There was quite a large attendance, and a great deal of work was accomplished.

A report was received from the commit tee to which was referred yesterday the reports of the president, the vice president and the executive board. The report stated that it found a number of valuable recommendations in President Briggs' report, and urged their adoption. Among these sug-

Another suggestion was the apportionment of a small per capita sum on members in the local unions and on the local unions as members of the state unions to defray the current expenses of the national union.

This latter recommendation, when it came to be acted upon, gave rise to considerable discussion, for some of the members of the convention thought that the system of voluntary contributions was the better, es- in which he says: pecially as an assessment would be in viowho had surrendered the chair to Mr. A. M. Shinn's Remarks. Some of the members took the ground that the proposed change was not really in Shinn, said that there was but one other organization with which this national union could be compared and that was the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor, and in this organization the proposition to levy an assessment was always opposed and yet they had always had the funds to do an immense amount of good work. He objected to a system of apportionment on members because it would bring this national body to the level of a machine, while it should really be a great educational and religious institution. Another objection to the scheme was the fact that the Universalist Church is a poor body. Other churches work for the rich people, they do not try to get the poor into their flocks, and the result is that when the Universalist Church comes along only the very poor are left for it to take. A system of assessments would come very hard upon such people.

Mr. Shinn told of an experience of his this fall in Kansas, where he was at work organizing unions. The people among whom he was laboring at the time did not actually live upon watermelons, but they did live by mense amount of good work. He objected crop was so large that they could not sell any of them and the result was that they were wretchedly poor. There were young people, who would be eligible to membership in the Y. P. C. U., but upon such people as these in a year like this assessments, no matter how small, would come as a severe burden.

After some further discussion this article was referred back to the committee on resolutions for further consideration. The article not only recommending, but urging that the different state unions employ and maintain in the field, state organizers was adopted, as were articles referring to the systematic dissemination of literature, the appointment of a committee of five to compile a young people's hymn book and other matters of more or less importance to the national union.

One of the most important matters that came up before the convention this morning was the presentation by Mr. Harrington of a kellen was the presentation by Mr. Harrington of a cheme for a more liberal giving to the inissionary funds raised by the young people of the Universalist Church. The scheme, he said, was one suggested to him by Miss Rose of New York, and involved the distribution of envelopes among all the members of the union. Each member should promise or agree to put two cents a week in to the envelope, and these should all be collected through the unions. If only one-half of the members would agree to this plan, it would not come hard upon any one, but the money raised in a single ver would amount to the generous sum of $6,000. you must have known the effect of language such as you uttered on that occasion. Now you have testified in your own behalf, and you told us you did not believe in our laws, and that you have no respect for them. Such a person cannot be tolerated in this community by those who believe in law, and I am happy to say that the greater number of our people do believe in law. I think it very improper that the great strength of this nation is not exercised to the extent that you and those who entertain the same ideas should be met at the portal of our country to the end that they should not be allowed to enter here.

"We are proud of our institutions, and much money and much blood have been spent to build them up, and we do not propose that any person, man or woman, shall undertake to tear them down. We do not propose to allow you to bid defiance to our institutions without showing you that the strong arm of the law will take hold of you and that the law cannot be defied. I look upon you as a dangerous woman in your doctrine. Fortunately, there are only a few, compared with the great number of our citizens, who believe in your doctrines, but it is necessary that those who believe the way you do should be taught that the law will be vindicated." Their Dream Shattered.

William Hallett, a young man who says he was discharged from the third artillery because he was two minutes late at roll call, was in the Police Court this morning charged with theft. He had been locked charged with theft. He had been locked up at the sixth precinct station last night, where he was taken by Detective Rhodes. Miss Ann Barrett, a domestic in an E street boarding house, appeared and made her complaint. She met the young man nearly three years ago, when he wore the bine uniform and lived at the barracks. He visited her and they attended religious meetings together, going to the Central Union Mission and the Salvation Army together. On the evening in question they had attended the religious meetings mentioned. Miss Ann attempted to take her escort's arm as usual, but she thought he acted a little cold. He pulled away from her. so she thought, and then he left her on the street and went into a store to get a package of cigarettes.

The young woman missed her watch and she suspected her companion. He denied it and submitted to a search, but no watch was found.

William and Ann parted at the front door that night, but they were no longer friends. The friendly ties which bound them had been severed and Ann went off and swore out a warrant.

Judge Miller heard her statement, and then the young man told his side of the story.

LIQUOR LICENSES. Dealers Getting Uneasy as November As the first day of November gets nearer the liquor men get uneasy. Notices have been sent to all those who are licensed at present that all licenses expire October ii, and applications under the new law must be made. Several applications have already drifted in, but the great rush is expected next week. A careful estimate of the saloons of the city, by a prominent liqu loons of the city, by a prominent liquor man, shows that few saloons will go mader by reason of the increase in the licensa fee. For months the liquor men have been saving, and the amount of revenue derived from liquor licenses this year will be large. The Commissioners propose to follow their rule of giving notice through The Star of all applications for liquor licenses filed with them. This will give no one the excuse that the application was rushed through. On Tuesday afternoon, October 31, the excise board will organize for the new license year. There will be no changes in the officers of the board. Commissioner Parker will still be the president, and it is safe to say that there will be no change in the rules. Meetings will be held on Tuesdays and Fridays at 2 o'clock, and applications will be taken up for action in the order of their filing. This is a new manner of disposing of applications. Heretofore they have been taken up alphabetically or by precincts and disposed of that way. Last year 638 licenses for har rooms were granted and 462 wholesale licenses.

It is expected that there will be a greater falling off in the wholesale applications than in the retail. Two rejections will make the case finally disposed of, and the excise board will not take up a case the second time upon purely cumulative evidence.
